Oil Refinery Will Have To Close Down In 20 Days

Teheran, July 1. The Abadan oil refinery, the biggest in the world, will be forced to close down in 20 days if the present rate of production continues, a spokesman for the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company said here tonight.

An earlier message from Abadan quoted Mr K. B. Ross, general manager of the refinery, as saying that production of the refinery was being cut in half today because tankers were no longer taking the oil.

COMMENT OF THE DAY

THE revelation has just been made

Minister of Supply is at loggerheads with the Steel Federation, and at a recent conference at Margate he accused members of the Federation of doing everything within their power to thwart the State Steel Corporation which has been established to control the nationalised steel industry. The Minister possibly has some grounds for complaining that his Steel Corporation is not receiving 100 per cent co-operation from former leaders in this industry.

They, through their Federation, have never retracted one iota in their opposition to the nationalisation of the industry, and Mr. Strauss can hardly be surprised at their lack of sympathy for the new controlling body. Yet the Minister of Supply has not told the full story. As one writer has pointed out, the supply of steel in Britain has been maintained since last summer by heavy drains on stocks of iron ore, pig iron, scrap and half-finished steel in the steel works, and on stocks of finished steel accumulated by consumers. All these matters have been under the supervision of the Minister of Supply; had he wanted the withdrawals from stocks to be suspended they would have been stopped. Without this draft on stocks industrial output would have been lower, and it is fair to suppose that the Government accepted the fall of stocks in the hope that something would turn up to assist their replenishment. Chances of buying steel in Europe, when the Americans were buying at high prices, was robably missed, but again the Minisry of Supply knew of the chances and could have pressed them. It is sugrested that the Steel Federation lost some imports of ore by refusing for a began to rise, although this can hardly be held as a decisive factor in the current steel shortage in Britain. Even if all the right things had been done

-and they rarely are except by luck-the present difficulties would have been only a little less. Steel users have still not been told plainly how serious the prospects are. At the best supplies will be about 10 per cent less in the later months of this year than in the corresponding period of last year.

When defence needs have been satisfied the amount of steel for civil industries will be about a fifth less than it was at the end of 1950. And in Britain it is felt that it is not enough to say there will soon be the system of control and allocation that is urgently needed. Too many users will, even then, believe that their claim is so overwhelmingly strong that they cannot fail to be allotted all the steel for which they ask. Too much steel, goes at present into products where the value added in subsequent manufacture-is relatively small. Such products have been encouraged by the artificially low prices of steel. Clearly where there is a choice, goods with a high added value should be preferred for the export trade, so that, proportionately, skill and workmanship are exported rather than raw materials.

Conversely, it is argued, more raw metal products with added low value, which are available on the Continent, could and should be imported. These are the questions with which the Ministers concerned with steel should now be fully occupied. These are the matter on which, without recrimination, and political rancour, they should enlighten the people of Britain whose future, rests so largely on the conquering of the problem of steel supplies.

PROPOSAL

Delay In Starting Talks Puzzles

Washington, July 1.

The expectation at the United States Defence Headquarters this morning was that General Matthew B. Ridgway, the United Nations Supreme Commander in Korea, would accept within a few hours the Communist proposal to hold cease-fire talks in the Kaesong area between July 10 and July 15.

General Ridgway's instructions, it was unlerstood, were sufficiently flexible to permit him to agree to the time and place of the proposed conference without having to refer first to Washing-

Although officials were surprised at the quick Communist response to General Ridgway's offer on Friday --- when he suggested an armistice conference at Wonson Harbour - some disappointment was felt here that the "counter proposals" would delay the talks for at least 10 days.

Eighth Army Headquarters personnel, still awake, heard the announcement on a fiveminutes' short-wave broadcast Tokyo Armed. Forces

Although it was midnight and most of the officers and men were in bed and asleep, the news ran like wildfire through billets and camps and on up to the men in the line.

Officers on night duty who had not heard the radio were at once told by others who had listened in but it was some time before those who were told believed that it was not a leg-pull.

Lieutenant - General James Van Fleet was himself asleep when the news' came in and his staff decided not to tell him until the morning.

Surplus World Expected Cotton

Washington, July 1.

The world will produce more cotton than it consumes in the new crop year beginning on August 1, the International Cotton Advisory Committee predicted today.

Increased production would ] "make possible a moderate increase in the world stocks from their present reduced size," the Committee said.

It noted that on August 1 the world stocks would be at their lowest level in many years. The Committee made forecast in its periodic review of the world cotton situation. "The world cotton production in the 1951-52 season beginning August 1 is expected to be somewhat larger than the prospective world sumption," the Committee said. "The present outlook is still for a world cotton crop on the neighbourhood of 35 bales during 1951-52, although may be necessary to revise this figure upwards, ifcrop in the United States substantially in excess of 16 million bales."

you want to deceive an opponent, it isn't always necessary to make weird and wonderful plays. Your opponent may be already on the wrong track, and it is enough if you merely sit quietly without disturbing him. In today's hand West opened the king of spades, and Bouth won with the ace. Declarer drew trumps with the ' ace and king, and East mildly discarded the deuce of clubs on the second round of trumps. Declarer next led dummy's singleton club, and East saw no harm in playing the three of clubs. This didn't surprise South. He expected to find most of the missing high cards in West's hand because of West's bid. He naturally assumed that West had the ace of clubs, and therefore finessed the jack of clubs at this point, -

WEST won with the queen of clubs without lifting an eyebrow. He returned the queen of spades, and South ruffed as expected. It was still possible for South to make the hand by means of a squeeze if he suspected that East had the acc of clubs. However, South was convinced that the ace of clubs was still in the West hand. Therefore he eventually led the king of clubs through West and discarded from dummy when West played a low club. This gave East the chance to take his are of clubs for the setting trick.

It is important to note that de-clarer would make his slam without the alightest difficulty if East played the acc. of clubs when that suit was led for the first time. South would then have only two losing clubs, with two trumps in the dummy, to take care of them.

The Deadly Dawdle Of First Class Cricket Raises

There has been much comment and some protest concerning the deadly dawdle offered to a long-suffering public as first-class cricket, and paid as such. No less worthy of remark is its counterpart, the rush for runs and waste of wickets which sometimes follows loss of much precious time,

Take the case of Nottinghamshire and Warwickshire at Trent Bridge. On the first day 321 runs were scored for seven wickets; on the second day 277 runs for seven wickets. The first innings was then still not finished.

London, July 1. If it be true that village cricket is the cradle of this famous British sport, then the low standard of the game in England today must be traced to the villages.

HISTORY MADE

For the first time in Wimbiedon's long history, a Brazilian player, Armondo Vicirta; reached the last eight. Vieira, a slocky acrobatic little player, with a deadly volley, "killed the glant-killer" in beating Hamilton Richardson, the United States junior champion, by 6-3, 1-6, 6-3 and 6-0. For it was Richardson, 18-year-old diabelic student from-, Louisiana who early in the work had created the surprise of the championships by putting out the holder. Budge Patty of America.

Richardson was accordingly expected to win to-day but the Brazilian's hard hitting and accuracy proved too much for him. The mid-court play and. spectacular volleying of Vicina forced Richardson into orrors.

Vicira now has the task of taking on the South African Eric Sturgess, one of the best stroke players in the world.

All the fancied women playors got safely through to the last eight, in which there are six Americans and two British Wightman Cup players.

London, June 30. A remarkable scene occurred at Trent Bridge today when the Nottinghamshire captain, Reg Simpson, put himself on to bowl underarm deliveries to Wilf Wooller, the Glamorgan captain, apparently as a retort to "go slow" batting tactics.

This was the culminating incident in a period of drab play during which only 12 runs were scored from 15 overs, nine of which were maidens.
